

Lesson 49: 目標の設定 purpose, goal の作る形

purpose of ~ is to

The purpose of the new marketing strategy is to increase brand awareness.

The purpose of this assignment is to improve your writing skills.

The purpose of this study is to analyze the effects of sleep deprivation.

The purpose of collecting this data is to identify patterns in behavior.

The purpose of this app is to help you manage your time more effectively.

The purpose of this regulation is to ensure public safety.

aim is to

Our aim is to expand into international markets by next year.

The aim of this course is to build a solid foundation in mathematics.

My aim is to pass the Kyoto University entrance exam this year.

Our aim is to reduce environmental impact through innovation.

The team's aim is to launch the product by December.

Our main aim is to improve customer satisfaction.

idiom

Barking up the wrong tree

Meaning: To look for something in the wrong place or to blame the wrong person.

Example: If you think I took your book, you're barking up the wrong tree. I haven't seen it.

You're barking up the wrong tree trying to get sympathy from him — he's not the emotional type.

Lesson 50: 論点の配列 1: 最初に・次に・最後にの流れ

At first ~, but after a while ~

At first, I found English grammar really confusing, but after a while, it started to make sense.

At first, I didn't know anyone at school, but after a while, I made some great friends.

At first, yoga felt boring, but after a while, I found it very relaxing.

At first, I didn't understand her actions, but after a while, I realized she was trying to help me.

At first, the movie was a bit slow, but after a while, it got really interesting.

at last

At last, I passed the entrance exam for Kyoto University.

At last, all the hard work paid off.

At last, he confessed his feelings to her.

At last, we arrived at our destination after a long journey.

The mystery was solved at last.